We are well into the summer, "the dog days of August." I always wondered what that meant, so I did a little research on the web;

In ancient Greece and Rome, the Dog Days were not just a term but a belief. They were thought to be a time of drought, bad luck, and unrest, when dogs and men alike would be driven mad by the extreme heat. This belief, rooted in their understanding of the natural world, adds a layer of historical significance to the term.

The Ancient Romans referred to this as "dies canicular," 'days of the dog star,' translated to "dog days." These are the hottest and most humid times of the year. The dates vary: July 3rd to August 11th or July 24th to August 24th.

To me, it's just plain hot and humid. Thank you, Willis Carrier and Fredrick McKinley Jones.

Enjoy the rest of your summer. Thank you.

* Thank you Joe & Jeannie, once again, for another great 4th of July picnic.

I hope we realize what both Joe and Jeannie do for the village.

It goes well beyond a holiday picnic.

Tick Safety Information from Rutgers University, New Jersey Dept. of Health and the CDC

When are ticks active and how do tick-borne diseases spread?

Ticks could be active year round with peak times listed below.

Tick-borne diseases are not spread between two people, but rather rely on ticks for transmission.

What are the symptoms of tick-borne diseases?

Early signs of tick-borne diseases generally include:

Skin rash, general tiredness, fever, chills, headache, stiff neck, muscle aches, joint pain, and/or dizziness.

How are tick-borne diseases diagnosed?

It is important to watch for symptoms, talk to your healthcare provider and be sure to let them know you had a tick bite. If you've been bitten by a tick, early treatment can be very effective.

How can tick-borne diseases be prevented?

Anyone who is bitten by an infected tick may get a tick-borne disease. Helpful hints include:

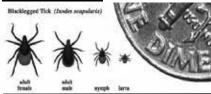

- Take extra precautions in the summer when ticks that transmit diseases are most active
- When outdoors, apply EPA-registered insect repellent on exposed skin and clothing according to the instructions on the product label. DEET, picardin, and oil of Lemon Eucalyptus may be used on skin. Permethrin should only be used on clothing and outdoor gear
- Cover up; wear long, solid and light colored clothing with pants tucked into socks. Perform tick checks
- Safely remove any found ticks

Where can I find more information about tick-borne diseases?

- Rutgers, Tick and Tick-borne Disease, Information for Residents: https://njaes.rutgers.edu/tick/
- New Jersey Department of Health Communicable Disease Service: http://www.nj.gov/health/cd%20

A former resident of ours penned this article back in 2011. Recently, she reached out to me and asked if I would consider reprinting it. Many of you may know Dot; for those who don't, she was a highly involved member and once served as president of our Residents Club.

This article deeply moved me, and I'm confident it will resonate with you as well. Here is goes...

ARE YOUR SCARS SHOWING?

Do you like to watch the TV program Dancing With The Stars? Oh, come on. It's OK to admit it. My husband and I do enjoy watching the program. I suppose the main reason I like to watch is because I envy the rhythm that seems to be a natural asset for most of the contestants. The past 2011 season was especially interesting. The dancer of interest - J. R. Martinez. J.R. was a soldier in Iraq when his vehicle drove over a landmine. J.R. was seriously injured; he has severe scarring on his face. In spite of his disfigurement, J.R. has become a television actor and a very active spokesperson for the military persons who did not come home. I thought of the above verse when I read this quote from J.R.: "My uniform is now my scars and my weapon is my words, so I'm still serving."

This article made me think of all of us here in Village I or even throughout our retirement area here in Whiting. We all come from different walks of life, different career backgrounds, different family situations, different financial situations, different health problems. All of these things have worked together to make us who / what we are today.

Our "scars" or background are not always evident like JR's - because most of them are emotional and very personal. But though they are not visible for people to see, they are seen through our personalities and/or words & actions.

Next time you form an opinion of a new acquaintance, wait a minute and think about what perhaps has transpired in their lives that may have made them reclusive or sad or even aggressive. We do not know the hardships or heartaches of others until we get to know them personally. Take the time — you may make a great new friend or be able to offer some kind and encouraging words or just be a great neighbor.
